

Boosting Morale at the Workplace: How Can Employee Time Tracking Help

Material reward is no longer the most powerful motivator – corporate morale, ethics and value are equally important

Corporate morale has to be consistent with employees' own beliefs and values – in this case their job satisfaction, motivation and productivity increases

Disengaged employees cost US economy around $300 million every year

A man with dark hair and a beard, wearing a blue and white checkered shirt, is seated at a desk in an office. He is looking down at a tablet computer he is holding with both hands. In the background, another person is blurred, working at a desk. The overall scene is brightly lit, suggesting a modern office environment.

How can employee time tracking help to boost engagement and increase morale at the workplace?

Employee time tracking encourages equality – all data on performance are objective and career promotion is based on real achievements

Employee time tracking helps build strong relationships with both office personnel and remote staff and freelancers

Employee time tracking boosts productivity by showing where the time goes and helping to manage it better

To make employee time tracking even more effective it's better to use apps because manual checks are time-consuming and unreliable

A good option to consider is Yaware.TimeTracker – a web-based app which measures time and productivity automatically
